The ICCAS

The International Conference on Culinary Arts and Sciences (ICCAS) was founded in 1993 by the Worshipful Company of Cooks of London as a forum for culinary artists and scientists from academia and industry to present their work and share ideas. ICCAS is the only international conference that brings together the two sides of the international food industry, food science and food service.

Theme of the 12th ICCAS conference

The way we eat and the food we produce, process and distribute are intrinsically linked to the health and well-being of individuals as well as to the protection of the planet. The 12th ICCAS conference focuses on the active role of the culinary arts and food sciences in the creation and dissemination of healthy and tasty foods that meet the economic, societal and environmental challenges of sustainable meal systems for all citizens.
